

Rosemary Tyrrell, EdD

Rosemary Tyrrell, EdD, serves as Director of the Office of Faculty Development and Assistant Clinical Professor in the Department of Social Medicine, Population, and Public Health at the University of California, Riverside School of Medicine. In this role, she leads a dedicated team responsible for delivering hundreds of faculty development programs and services each year, all aimed at fostering teaching excellence across the institution.

Dr. Tyrrell co-chairs the TEACH Team (Teaching Excellence and Course Enhancement), a committee focused on advancing educational quality and assessment. She also chairs the UCR School of Medicine's Kern National Network committee on Flourishing and leads the Teaching, Learning, and Curriculum Committee for the Master of Public Health (MPH) program. In addition to these roles, she oversees the School of Medicine's Administrative Fellowship program and contributes to strategic curriculum enhancement efforts.
